ABSTRACT

Address defined session management permits data interchange across a stateless channel utilizing the existing addressing protocol in a particular communications channel without altering the body of the message itself. By establishing a session identifier, applications and/or users can engage in interactive data communications through any stateless communications channel with any corresponding application that requires interactive communication.